PUNCTUALITY.

"It is injurious to hasten, and delay is frequent y injurious-the man is wise who does every thing in its proper time." A few evenings ago, as I was sitting at my parlour window, that overlooks the street, a man apparently about thirty years old, of a sunburnt complexion, and rather homely appearance, frequently past my house, as if in search of some abode near by, but which he could not readily find-at last, he stepped up to my door and knocked; he was answered by one of the servants, who directly brought me a letter-I opened it, and found the contents nearly as follow. The reader will excuse honest PLAINWAY's familiarity, when he learns that the farmer and myself had been playfellows in our youth, being both brought up in the same neighbourhood. To Mr. * * * * * , the Observer.

SIR-It is for you to know, that I came to this city a few weeks since, with wife Deborah, (generally called Debby for brevity sake,) and three fine children-but first I will let you a little into my concerns. I have been married now about ther, we've been from our infancy companions, and consequently, at a very early age, contracted such a warm friendship for each other that at last it made Miss DEBBY HARROWELL and myself, one. Therefore, it being her wish that we should move to town, I could not do otherwise than comply .-But to come to the purport of this letter-which is to complain of the want of Punctuality so general among your tradesmen-my wife insisted, that to appear clever in the city, I should throw off my domestic drapery and change it for that which was more fashionable-so I bespoke of a taylor, a suit of clothes. "When can I have them," said I to Mr. Threadneedle-" Why, let me see, they will be finished by Friday-unless you are in great haste, in that case, you can have them sooner."-"No," said I, " the time mentioned will do if you do not disappoint me"-laying peculiar stress on the word disappoint. He assured me he would not, and I withdrew. Well, after all the Taylor's professions I did not get my new suit. I waited upon him to know the reason of such neglect, and he gave me for answer, that as I had said I was not in haste, he thought I would not object to wait a little while longer. Surely this is no way to do business-as I, for one, would never trouble Mr. Threadneedle again, if I knew any other habit maker more correct in his time-but it is not only my TAILOR, but my SHOEMAKER, WATCH. MAKER, HATTER, and, in fact, all that I have had any dealings with yet, I have found equally negligent. I remember my father often used to say to me, "Mat, (you know he always called me Mat,) take my word for it, punctuality is the soul of industry and the life of business "

Deborah complains sadly of the MILLINERS and MANTUA-MAKERS She says that Sally Jones, who made all her bonnets and dresses when in the country, never disappointed her customers-nor, says my wife in a tone of repreach, did she charge half so much as they do here—which, at least, she argues, ought to make them keep their promises and I am a little of her opinion myself.

With this, Sir, I conclude, hoping that you will not forget to mention this subject in the next number of the Observer.

I am, your obedient servant, MATTHEW PLAINWAY.

I perfectly agree with my friend Matthew, in is remarks, that nothing is more requisite than punctuality-it is a quality which the interests of who pretended an extraordinary sanctity mankind requires to be diffused through all ranks

The constant and uninterrupted succession of the lightning's flashes rendered every object perfectly visible-he looked over the bow head, and on the wave immediately preceding the vessel, Donald Morvan, breast high in the water, rode as in impress of death, and gloomed terribly on He beckoned forward-The vessel, as if attracted by magic, pursued him at a headlong rate. The spectre seaman mounted a lofty wave and the brig followed-he rushed down into a fearful abyss and after it swept the ship-And ever, as the flash of the lightning fell more directly upon it. the crew could see Donald waving his arms as if to impel the vessel to greater speed, while the ghastly smile which played round his shrivelled lips, and his long hair tious fears appeared a symbol from heaven

At length, the occasional pauses in the blast, and the more unfrequent peals of the thunderbolt, gave indication of the tempest's close. The day dawned, and the sun looked on the wave tossed vessel thro' a watery veil. As the day further advanced the storm died gradually away, and the sea re-assumed its glassy tranquillity. The sun burst in unclouded glory, and the reanimated crew betook themselves to the glided before them, and still he motioned them onward. The ship lay too for a moment, when he seemed to rise still farther from the water, and angrily beckoned. The captain, freed from the alarm created by the tempest, became more agitated: and seizing the helm, for the spirit still kept immediately before them, turned the vessel in a contrary direction. Still Donald maintained his station. The day was fast waning when the crew beheld the spectre suddenly raise himself completely from the ocean, and stood on it, as firm as if it was the deck on which they trade. But it was for a moment only, and he then disappeared forever. The brig reached the place and immediately struck upon a rock. In despair the captain ordered out the boats, but before the command could be complied with, the vessel sunk, and the dark wave rolled over her and the crew.

Guilt triumphant over Innocence,

STORY OF EMMA SOMERTON If to awaken the sympathy of the heart in another, and to elicit the noblest feelings that heart can boast, be an object whereon language were well bestowed, it is to be hoped that the following tale will not be unacceptable to a class of your, readers, to whose sensibility it is particularly addressed.

In a romantic village in the North of England, which health might have chosen as her habitation, and content as her resting place, there resided a family whose melancholy destiny, though long unmourned, now claims the willing tribute of my pen. Everard Somerton had long since past the She stript her mantle from her breast meridian of life: -calmly mellowing into that grave and quiet deportment that attend the steps of age, and marks the maturity of character when the effervescence of youth and spirits have flown, he appeared the vision of the by-gone age, and the memento of former times. I have hung with enthusiastic eagerness upon the narratives of his youth. and have heard him recount his adventures while in the hey-day of his blood, with all that avidity which youth delights in while catching the accents of truth and experience. In his early life he had been unfortunate, and to this favoured spot of nature he had retired, carrying with him the only relics of his house, two beloved grand-children with whom he wished to spend the remainder of his life in all that delight which arises from the and as the night still further advanced, it harmony of feelings, and the pleasures of reciprocal affection.

As the oak in the forest, so was he in the vil lage, which felt and acknowledged the influence of his precept and the power of his protection. He was universally beloved by his inferiors, and ings, than the profane ridicule of the worst the centre of the heavens, it paused. A the suavity of his manners endeared him to those with whom too often virtue is no recommendation, nor goodness of heart any security from the inve teracy of malice, or the arrows of detraction.

Deprived of their natural parents in early life Theodore and Emma had long been accustomed to consider the venerable Everard as their parent, and the recollection of the endearing accents that had once been lisped to those more entitled to that appellation, was now entirely banished, and even of heaven speaking in the thunder, and the remembrance claimed not a sigh from them to embitter the present, or make them acknowledge that deprivation, they had now by reason of their grandfather's affection, so little cause to deplore With a mind highly endued with the brightest natural faculties, and chastened by education, and the prevailing example of his grand-sire, Theodore was at once the pride and ornament of the village youths: his superiority, because involuntaed each other to the masts, or the railing, ry, was never overbearing, and was as frequently his recommendation, where it was the most con spicuous, as allowed and acknowledged by those

Like the rose of the morning, that blows in the freshness of beauty, and charms the senses with its delightful fragrance, and the tempting perfection of its glowing hues, so the beauteous Emma expanded to the world. I have seldoin seen a triumph. The countenance still bore the face so fair, or a form in which elegance and dignity were so fully combined as that which graced the lovely Emma; and the accomplishments of the captain, who gazed in terror upon him. her mind vied only with the perfection of her per son, combining indeed in one blaze of beauty, all that can please or captivate the heart,-sure preventatives, I had once thought, to the unhallowed gaze of libertinism, or the approach of lawless passion; alas! that I should now have to deplore their destroying influence! Sweet emblem of purity! though I mourn thy lot, yet shall my pen boast inspiration while speaking thy praise, and though lowly its accents, yet sincerity shall mark them-for to know thee and not own thee all loveliness, were denying the effulgence of the glorious orb of day !

Emma was but young, for the roses of eighteen face was adorned with an expression and beausix years—my wife was born and educated in of their immediate destruction. Still for- ning mildness in her eyes was counteracted by the

the country, and our parents living near toge | ward rode the spectre, and with the same | more repulsive majesty of her person, which though it inspired pleasure and admiration, served to create an ideal awe in those who might approach too unreverently the shrine of their devotions: and there was cast over her every feature that charm of innocence, which seemed like the mantle of virtue thrown over one of her most favoured votaries. Her intelligent blue eyes were the faithful mirrors of her polished mind, and reflected that lustre and purity of soul which was hers so pre-eminently, and which was manifest in every action of her unspotted life.

It happened in the Spring of -, that a party of soldiers passed through the village, on their way to a distant town, where they intended to quarter, and that a young officer of the party, when the men had halted on their march to refresh themselves, rode immediately from the repair of the vessel. But still the spectre ranks and proceeded to the house that contained the family of the Somertons. Mounted on a gallant charger, and completely equipped en militaire, he moved along with a commandingness of deportment and nobility of action, that completely astonished the simple and wonder-struck villagers, and drew frequent gazes of attention from many whose admiration was as flattering to its object's vanity as involuntary in themselves.

SINGULAR PRESERVATION.

In December last, Harrison G Blake, his wife, and child about 15 months old, left Salem, N. Y. intending to visit his father in law and other friends beyond the Green mountains, in Vermont. Night overtook them whilst crossing the mountains, and their horse, overcome with his exertions to proceed through the snow, which was very deep, began to lag, and at length stopped. Determined, if possible, to save themselves and their child, they loosed him from the sleigh, and Mrs Blake mounted him, carrying the child in her arms. She rode but a short distance, before she was compelled to dismount and walk after her husband. She soon became unable any longer to carry the child, and wrapping it in a great coat, laid it in the snow and endeavor ed to overtake her husband, who by this time had advanced out of bearing of her feeble cries. She had not proceeded more than 150 rods, when she became so chilled and frozen that she sunk-never to rise again! She was found al ve next day, but survived only a few moments. Mr. B. was found about 48 rods from her, in a perishing condition, and but for this timely relief, must soon have been beyond the reach of human aid. The babe was found with its face naked and in the snow with one foot slightly frozen. When taken up, it smiled affectionate.y on its preserver. The following lines on the death of Mrs. Blake, are from the Eastern Argus

The cold winds swept the mountain's height, And pathless was the dreary wild. And 'mid the cheerless hours of night A mother wander'd with her child, As through the drifted snow she press'd The babe was sleeping on her breast. And colder still the winds did blow, And darker hours of night came on, And deeper grew the drifts of snow-O God!' she cried, in accents wild,

Her limbs were chill'd, her strength was gong-"If I must perish, save my child."

And bar'd her bosom to the storm, And round her child she wrapt the vest. And smil'd to think her babe was warm-With one cold kiss, one tear she shed, And sunk upon a snowy bed. At dawn a traveller pass'd by,

And saw her 'neath a snowy veil-The frost of death was in her eye, Her cheek was cold, and hard, and pale-He mov'd the robe from off the child The babe look'd up, and sweetly smil'd.

THE YOUNG LOVERS.

EXTRACT FROM BRACEBRIDGE HALL.

"To a man who is a little of a philosopher, and a bachelor to boot, and who, by dint of some experience in the follies of life, begins to look with a learned eve upon the ways of man and eke of woman:--to such a man, I say, there is something very entertaining in noticing the conduct of a pair of young levers. It may not be as grave and scientific a study as the loves of the plants; but it is certainly interesting .-I have therefore derived much pleasure since my arrival at the Hall, from observing the fair Julia and her lover. She has all the delightful blushing consciousness of an artless girl, inexperienced in coquetry, who has made her first conquest; while the captain regards her with that mixture of fondness and exultation, with which a youthful lover is apt to contemplate so beauteous a prize. I observed them yesterday in the garden advancing along one of the retired walks. The sun was shining with delicious warmth, making great masses of bright verdure and deep blue shade. The cuckoo, that harbinger of spring, was faintly heard from a distance; the thrush piped from the hawthorn, and the yellow butterflies sported and toyed and fluttered in the air. The fair Julia was leaning on her lover's arm, listening to his conversation, with her eyes cast down, a soft blush upon her cheek, and a quiet smile on her lips: while in the hand that hung negligent by her side was a bunch of flowers. In this way they were sauntering slowly along, and when I considered them, and the scene in which they were moving, I could not but think it a thousand pities that the season should ever grow older, or that blossoms should give way to fruit, or that lovers should ever get married."

ORIGIN OF NEWSPAPERS IN FRANCE. De Saintfoix, in his his orical essays, gives the following account of the introduction of Gazettes: Theophrastus Renaudat, a physician of Paris, picked up news from all quarters, to amuse his patients: he presently became more in request than any of his brethren; but as a whole city is not ill, or at least dont imagine itself to be so, he began to reflect at the end of some years, that he might gain a more considerable income by giving a paper every week, containing the news of dif ferent countries. A permission was necessary: had hardly spread themselves on her cheek: in he obtained it, with an exclusive privilege in the person she was rather above the middle size; her year 1632. Such papers had been in use for a considerable time at Venice, and were called Gazettes, because a small coin called Gazetta was streaming in the blast, to their supersti- for pourtraying a Hebe, and the chissel of the statuary might have borrowed inspiration from the Gazettes, and their name. CALLOWHILL-STREET .- A few years ago very laudable attempt was made to accommodate our northern fellow citizens with a Market House in Callowhill-street. The design, aberally as it was intended to be executed, was not maintained with a commensurate vigour, and the plan being consequently abandoned, the whole scheme ended in abortion, and the buildings which they had already erected, were appropriated to other purposes. A number of spirited individuals, are now about reviving, with much policy and forethought, the plot which their predecessors had devised, and papers of solicitation are already distributed for that purpose. It is contemplated to erect a Ferry from the foot of that street, to the Jersey shore, which will hold out enticing allurements to our neighbours on that side, to visit the new establishment, the more so as the convenience of situation in it, will be peculiarly suited to their de-

Should this wished-for project be followed up by its deserved success, our city will be enabled boast, besides the great vegetable market-of what few other cities can; Seven markets, with nineteen different market houses, some of those so well lined that few people can walk round them in the winter season, in the course of a morning.

THE HURRICANE.-The region of Pennsy vania is seldom visited by those blustering gales which assume the character of hurricanes, more particularly that district of it which ourselves inhabit, but on Tuesday last, the citizens in the upper western part of the state were threatened with a visit from angry Boreas, which would call upon their utmost efforts to resist. In that section the most mountainous, a tornado of a very alarming nature was experienced, though we learn it was of limited duration, passing in " its fell swoops" over the adjacent valleys, and making its course across our city itself, until we presume it reached the ocean. Extensive damage was committed at and around the Falls of Schuylkill, the ground there being of a high and undulating character-and we regret to learn, that the beautifully romantic and delightful seat, formerly the country residence of the late Mr. Dallas, now the property of Richard Peters, jun Esq. and in the occupancy of Mr. John Carter, jun. as an Hotel, and used as a very fashionable retreat, sustained considerable damage. The chimneys of the houses designated by the title of the Cottage, were blown away-and several majestic and lofty trees, the worth of which could not well be enhanced, were swept away, the grounds and out-houses experienced also some portion of the shock, the avidity of which was such as to astonish the occupants, inmates and visiters then present. The damage we are told, however, is readily repaired, and we are happy to learn that Mr. Carter, through the politeness of his Landlord, and his own spirited and individual exertions, is not only placing the establishment in a state to accommodate his numerous city visiters again, but in a more commodious style, if possible, than ever. The place has always been remarkable for the salubrity of the air surrounding it, and the consequent benefit to be derived by the convalescent.

COMMUNICATION.

We are by no means astonished that the celebrated TALMA, could not by the most splendid proposals from the Dramatic people of New-Orleans, be induced to make an embarkation to this country. He lives, it is related, like an Eastern prince at his chateau-dressing himself in his rich stage robes, and receiving the most obsequious homage of his attendants.-Republican simplicity might not be adapted to his taste, and probably he might expect to encounter nothing else. There is little question that he would be sought after, with as much avidity as was Mr. Cooks-though the likelihood of the same extent of remuneratio within the same length of time, being bestowed at the present day, stands not within the prospect of belief. The sums of money which the latter gentleman brought into the several treasuries, may be conjectured by the following list, though in New-York and Baltimore, there are two engagements of several nights of which we have no accounts. He arrived here on the 16th November, 1810, and died 26th September, 1812-not one year and eleven months residence. Three engagements at New-York, enumerating 43 nights yielded $40.110. Boston two seasons, 32 nights, $22,887 78 cents. Philadelphia, two seasons, 34 nights $34,336 49 cents. Providence (R. I.) a small honse, 22 nights, two seasons $1,861 25 cents. These sums amount, if a benefit he played for, be allowed, of 460 dollars, the last night of his appearance upon any stage, to $99.655 50 cents, besides the unaccounted nights. A seductive relation to an adventurer, though he may be assured it has no parallel.

COMMUNICATION A Bible Class composed of young men has lately been established in this city, under the direction of the Rev Mr. Allen; the object of which is to explain the Scriptures. Questions in writing are given one evening, to which answers also in writing are brought at the next meeting, which are at a subsequent meeting lectured upon. If the young men of our city once knew the value of such an institution, they would not, I am convinced, hold back; no expense will be incurred, and there is also an extensive Library attached to the institution. The Class already consists of fifty members, but it is expected it would increase very considerably were it better known. The Class holds its meetings in Pear street, in the School Room belonging to St. Paul's Church, every Monday evening at 8 o'clock.

REVOLUTIONS IN FINANCE. - An event has just occurred, which adds a new feature to the revolutions of human affairs-a number of the holy al liance finds it impracticable to extinguish their paper currency.

Russia has been under the necessity of making normous sacrifices to obtain a loan in Holland. Austria is still worse.

Prussia is no better. Spain having failed to pay all her fiscal engagenents, cannot raise a dollar in Europe upon her credit-that Spain which engrossed and distributed "the wealth of the new world."

Mark the reverse-the minister (Zea) of the republic of Colombia has concluded a loan of ten millions of dollars, at 6 per cent per annum, with an eminent banking house in London.

Thus after an unexampled conflict and vicissitudes of twelve years duration-a colonial dependence of Spain rescued from her authority and established as a Republic, already possesses a credit in Europe which Spain herself cannot obtain with all the pride of her ancient monarchy.

The revolution of Colombia has been effected with less debt than any known in modern history; before this loan the debt of Colombia amounted to about two and a half millions of dollars; so that her whole debt with this loan will not be equal to one vear's revenue of the United States-or 15,000,600 dollars.

LOVES TOKENS .- The giving or receiving of kair, is a token of love, or of remembrance, has been long considered dangerous, nay fatal to the duration of an attachment. Never was the justice of this objection rendered more manifest, never more high life." The now countess of B, was the "reliet of the late E. T. D, Esq." and "in one little month, or ere those shoes were old," and so ing bride." The countess was remarkable for a beautiful head of hair-(was we say, for it has not | coming, and after some delay, during which the late beloved husband, she approached the coffin in which his remains were aout to be enclosed--seized a pair of scissors, and (oh, heavy tale!) cut off, at one fell swoop, those beauteous ringlets, " which (as she pathetically exclaimed upon the occasion) he had lov'd so much while living, and which he should bear with him to the grave," suitng the action to the word, she cried with Gertrude, sweets to the sweet," strewed them on his corpse and was borne away inanimate-Peace to his manes.

FAMINE IN IRELAND.

The Irish papers contain accounts of the dreadful situation of that unfortunate country. They detail particularly the state of thirteen baronies, in which thousands of people are actually in a state of starvation. Famine, in its most heart-rending features, is spreading far and wide; and very little prospect of adequate relief being extended to the miserable inhabitants.

Price of Provisions .- It appears by the English apers, that provisions are as low, generally, in Great Britain, as in most of our principal cities .-The best beef 6d. a pound; butter from 7d. to 9d.; candles 6d. per tb. and so on. The difference lies in the vast disproportion of wages, and in the taxes. Here a mechanic receives from a dollar to ten, and oftentimes twelve shillings a day. In many places of England, scarcely a third of that sum is paid: while the taxes are so great as to reduce even that sum to a mere pittance. It cannot be a matter of surprise, under these circumstances, that a third of the population of England is actually dependant on public charity for subsistance.

The Marquis of Londonderry, in a late speech in the House of Commons, hinted hat it was contemplated to take off another million eight hundred thousand pounds sterling of Annual Taxes; equal to eight millions of dollars. Within the last seven years the annual taxes of Great Britain have been reduced $74,530,248, a further reduction of eight millions is now calculated upon. No nation has ever exhibited the capacity to pay taxes to the amount paid by the British; nor is there on record any account of such an immense reduction in the taxes of any nation.

South America .-- Advices received at Paris from Madrid of the 23d April, state that the Cortes in one of their late sittings had agreed to invite the governments of South America " which had established their independence," to enter into commercial treaties with Spain; thus indirectly acknowledging that they could no longer maintain their political influence over their ancient transatlantic colonies.

ROTTERDAM .- A letter from Holland says. the King has at length approved of the plan long since suggested for the construction of a canal to shorten the communication between Helvoetsluve and Rotterdam. All that is required indeed, is to effect an excavation through the small island of Voorn, to extend from a little distance above Helvoet to the village of Heervliet on the opposite side. The advantages Rotterdam will derive from this measure will be obvious to all who cast their eves on the map; since besides lessening the distance to Helvoetsluys, the Canal will be made navigable for vessels drawing 20 feet water and up-

The Duchess of Charance was lately brought to bed of twins, neither of whom lived but a few moments. This event, is the more important, as it tends to place, at least for the present, the line of succession to the throne of G. Britain, in the house of the Duke of Kent, the third brother of George IV. This prince it is known, married the sister of Prince Leopold of Cobourg.

An article from Copenhagen dated the 27th of April, says-" In the memory of man there was never so much damage done by storms as in the last winter It is calculated that about 2000 ships and 20,000 men have perished on the several coasts of Europe, of which 250 ships and 2,500 men were lost on the Danish coast alone.

A small quantity of young green peas, which when shelled, would probably fill about a pint measure, were produced on Saturday morning in Covent Garden Market, and four guineas were de-

Lord Normandy, in the House of Commons, moved an address to the King, praying that the office of one of the Postmaster Generals be abolished, and the salary saved to the people. This of course was opposed by the ministry, but on taking he vote, 216 voted for the address, and 201 against it, giving a majority of 15 against ministers. This ty deep. defeat of ministers was received with loud cheers.

At Bagshot, four women had been delivered of children, each with the loss of a right hand above the wrist." The only way this extraordinary curcumstance can be accounted for is, that the postman who delivers the letters has the same defect.

ROYAL PRECOSITY .- A rather Indierously affecting account is translated for the New York American, of a presentation to the family of the Bourbons, of a medal of the Duke of Berry, by a deputation from the city of Lisle, where his remains are. The Duke of Bourbon took the medal in his little hands, instantly recognized the portraitsof his father, and kissing it, said, 'poor papa!' ward Duke is about two years old; and his father was killed before he was born!

A letter from St Thomas, of the 25th ult. says : -"Six French slave vessels are fitting out at this port, for Africa. The Patriot brig President, capt. Maugridge, arrived here yesterday, from a cruize, having been on shore at the Canaries, hove over all her guns, and lay seven hours on her beam ends-captured but one vessel, a ship from Tarragona for Havana, which has arrived at Laguira .-She will go to Baltimore to refit. A schr. prize to the Leonora, capt. Nutter, with 300 slaves, has arrived at the Five Islands, and the cargo smuggled into this Island. The Bliss, of Baltimore, after having been cleared at Cabroxo, was again captured, the day after sailing, by the same privateer, carried into Mayaguez, and $ 000 demanded for the detention and time of the privateer; but our consul at St. Johns has gone down, with an order from Government for her release.

FROM MATANZAS .- Capt. Fosdick informs, that on the 28th of May, an English brig arrived there from Turks Island, which was fallen in with on Key Sal Bank by two piratical schooners, and robbed of three men, the Captain and mate hung by the neck, and the former so much cut and bruised, that he was not only unable to leave his bed, but it was doubtful whether he would recover .- N. Y. Gaz.

From New Orleans .- Capt. Scott, of the schr. Three Sisters, at New Orleans, informs "that he spoke off the Balize, the brig Belvidere, capt. Lamson, of Beverly, from Port-au-Prince, who informed him that on his passage, he was hailed from a piratical vessel, the captain of which ordered him to come on board. Captain L. replied that he was had time to be renewed.) On the decease of her , crew of the Belvidere were preparing to defend themselves, the commander of the pirates came along side in his boat, and jumped on board the Belvidere. Capt. Lamson instantly shot him down with a musket, and a severe conflict ensued between the crew of the boat, and that of the Belvi dere; the issue of which was the total defeat of the pirates, with the loss of 6 of their number killed. One seaman of the Belvidere was mortally wounded."

> BERMUDA,-Sir William Lumley, late Gover for of Bermuda, sailed from that Island on the 23d ult. for England, pursuant to his recall by his government. He left there on the evening of the 25th of May, and embarked the next day on board ship of war, which was to convey him to England. His exit produced among the people of St. George's the most enthusiaastic joy, which was proclaimed by a brilliant illumination of the town, firing of guns, &c. on the night of the 26th. These lively expressions of popular feeling finished that night by dressing up a figure, in the full uniform of a British general, (the usual attire of his Excellency,) which, after parading through the streets, followed by a large concourse of citizens, was finally burnt to ashes, amid the reiterated acclamations of the people.

MEXICO.-The schr. Highlander, captain Gibion, arrived here, from the port of Advarado, from which place she sailed on the 28th of May, rings intelligence from the city of Mexico, to the 25th of the same month On which day the Mexican Congress assembled in that city, and declared Don Augustine Yturbide, chief of that government with the title of Emperor

A letter from St. Thomas, May 25, says that at St. Domingo city, things are far from being settled. Gen. Touissaint commanded, and it was only by the most strenuous exertions he was able to keep the blacks quiet. The old settlers were not so well pieased as they expected to be with their new government. Haron Dupuy had been appoint. ed Governor of St. Jago City. All the rich Spaniards had moved from St Domingo.

The steam boat Swiftsure, Capt. Hall, which left Quebec on the morning of the 7th inst. for Montreal, was discovered to be on fire soon after sailing. Prompt assistance was rendered from Captains and crews of vessels in the harbor; and an engine taken alongside in a boat, and used with such success, that the fire was extinguished without much damage. There were on board at the time 450 settlers, besides 66 cabin passengers and the Boat's crew. One child was drowned during the confu-

Interesting Occurrence.-The child of an Emigrant lately fell from the deck of the steam-boat Lady Sherbroke, at Montreal, and although it was in fair view of its friends and parents, was suffered to float down the current, only upheld by its clothes from sinking. One of the crew of a Durham boat, while at work, was aroused by the busile which the situation of the little sufferer produced among a number of spectators on shore, as well as those on board the boat, and immediate. ly jumped into the water, swam to the place where the child yet floated, and brought it safely to its terrified parents. On his return to his boat, a number of the most respectable inhabitants who were witnesses to this generous act, contributed to make up a handsome sum, and presented it to the humane boatman. This action speaks well of the feelings of those who shared in it, and shews that they were capable of feeling and appreciating humanity; the bounty was deserved, and was ho- was held, and the jury returned that the man was doubly rewarded—by the gift, and by the day, about one mile from the body, was he best of all riches, the consciousness of having performed a good action.

SEA SERPENT .- The animal recently caught in the waters of Jersey, and now exhibiting in Broadway, is really a curiosity. It is no shark, nor horse mackerel, and whether fish or flesh, it is really a sea monster of no ordinary kind. It has two huge muscular fins, or rather wings, a little back of the gills, and two legs or paws, fifteen feet back of the fins, about the size of a man's leg, and the fore half somewhat resembling the forehalf of a human foot, with a nail about an inch long, on the heel. On the back, is a large bunch, with a fin on the top of it. The tail is peculiarly constructed, and when the animal was in motion, was elevated about six or seven feet. The mouth and throat are enormously large. The animal had no heart, and the liver was almost back to the tail. There was not a bone in the body. The hardest substance, (of which we have a specimen) being a kind of elastic gristle. The skin is of a dark brown colour, and entirely without scales. The animal must have been of immense power, and in the water might well have been taken for a sea dragon, worthy of being rode by Neptune himself. After all, we know but little of the wonders of the migh-[ N. F. Com. Adv.

Imprisonment for Debt .- It was decided at the last Vermont Circuit Court, that an act of the Legislature authorizing the liberation of a debtor from prison, and suspending, for a term of years, all proceedings against the body and property of debtors, is contrary to the restriction in section ten of the first article of the constitution of the United States, as impairing the obligation of a contract, and therefore invalid. During the late session of the Legislature of Kentucky, a law was passed extending the prisonbounds to the limits of the state. This is certainly the next thing to abolishing entirely the system which authorizes corporal restraint for indebted-Rattlesnakes .- The Illinois Gazette gives an account, certified by twelve respectable men, of the finding of a den of Rattlesnakes, about six miles from Mount Vernon, in Jefferson county, in that state. The den was found in a hill side or bluff, the surface fronting the north; the elevation of the hill above the surface of the water, in the branch at the bottom of it, supposed to be twenty feet; the ascent of some parts of it is so great, that a person could scarcely stand on it. Many small ioles were seen penetrating the hill side in different places, for one hundred yards, especially the steepest part of it, and leading to a mass of small sand stones, of a very soft texture. On digging two feet or more, they found stones of nearly the same texture, of various consistencies, composed of horizontal layers, with clefts and perpendicular fissures between them; in which were found, from the surface to the depth of about five or six feet, the following number of snakes, viz .-April 17th, 30 Rattle-snakes, 3 Copperheads, April 20th, 25 Rattle snakes, do. 14 Copper do. and 1 black do.

April 22d, 56 Rattle-snakes, do, 16 Copper do and 3 black do. They were found and killed in March, and two the 18th of April. Four were found dead in the den; and many appearances justify a belief that it has been a den of long standing—such as old rattles, bones, &c. &c. It is believed many had lest their den before it was found.

"A WORD TO THE WISE," &c. Nearly one year has elapsed since this paper was fint ushered into existence, and in that time we here received large accessions to the list of our beribers. According to the terms, which are gore liberal than the labour bestowed on the publication would warrant, THREE dollars will be exseed from all those subscribers who commence with the first No. and who shall not have paid any part of the subscription by the 4th of August gest-and we will not be backward in trying the fidity of the principle which has been adopted, these claims are not liquidated. Should there beany who cannot afford to compensate the prine any wine candid enough to own it, and then were useless to trouble each other longer. To these who are only indebted for six months subtription, we shall feet obliged if the small amount be paid on demand.

A presentment from the Grand Jury of Bradford County has been sent to us, we presume for publication, in which they complain of the "SusqueHANNA AND TIOGA TURNPIKE COMPANY" as a public abuse .-The length of this document prevents us from giving it entire, but the charges it contains are of so serious a nature that they deserve to be laid before the public, and the proper authorities.

They charge that Company with having employed the money (23,000 dollars) grantedit by the state for Internal Improvements, particularly in opening a road thro' the northern part of that county, in an impreper manner. That they bestowed the contracts for the work on favourities, living at a remote distance, in prejudice to the inhabitants of the county, although they had offered unquestionable security, to do the work well, and at a lower rate than those to whom contracts had been given. In consequence of this entire waste of the public money, they accuse the officers and gents of that Company with impure and corrupt motives.

They charge it with neglecting to give notice to the particular proprietors of the and through which the turnpike passes nor had the damages appraised been paid as by law they were bound to be.

They also state that the Turnpike has been for many months in an almost impassible state, and absolutely dangerous in my carriage-notwithstanding which, toll has been constantly and illegally exacted from travellers.

the citizens of New York, to superintend the erecion of a bronze statue to the memory of the illustrious Washington, have been advised by Mr Flaxman, a celebrated European artist, that he could furnish one of a colossal size, for about 4000l, which sum the merchants at Liverpool have whicribed towards a statue of the late king.-History tells us that Republics have heretofore en more or less ungrateful-that their Philosophers, Heroes and Statesmen, when they could offer no further allurement to popular feeling were affered in their latter days, to languish in ob kurity and neglect, with no other memento o he services they had rendered the state, than hat which fame rescued from oblivion. The same approach will rest on the present generation in time future age-for all the blessings which are low diffused o'er the land, could have had but ew charms if we still laboured under the opressive misrule of foreign masters-and the nemory of the GREAT CHIEF, who, like Joshua of espair, though it may smoulder in our hearts, and ome formal appearances of respect be exhibited, et there does not exist the least image of the iero, in any of our public walks, to attract the ttention of the stranger, or evidence the affection one of them sunk has be the stranger, or evidence the affection and both exchanged tist with and both exchanged tist with the linion. dis in the Union. Will Philadelphians let the menions of other cities expose their supinenessthe 4th instant, David West was and will they not make one effort to assist in rection of a structure worthy the virtues and bidom of the Patriot who achieved the Indepenthe they so often celebrate. This subject is inlated to interest every sentiment of national and the approaching anniversary would be broughle opportunity to urge the prosecution a laudable an object.

MYSTERIOUS CIRCUMSTANCE,

Considerable sensation has been experienced at ocaster, and in our own neighborhood, in conseace of the sudden disappearance and supposed order of a Mr. WILLIAM METATER. He was retented to be a merchant of New-Orleans, who a proceeding on business to Philadelphia, in the Refrom Pittsburg. Two men cailing themselves sons followed several days behind their father, when arrived here, they ascertained that no on of him were to be marked on this side of caster. They returned to that place and unthe impression that he had been murdered, ofda reward of $400 for the discovery of the pull. strator, and restoration of the property.

hom several circumstances, these men were Meives afterwards arrested on suspicion of havade away with their parent. They now assertbut he was alive and in the city, but that they to know where to find him : to save thema from imprisonment, however, they took the es to a hovel in Christian street near 7th, safter some difficulty, they entered and found man sitting on the garret stairs. He was the Mayor's office, and upon investigation ies were all discharged.

las been ascertained, since their examination mayor, that the old man three years ago, journeyman baker in this city, and went name of Georges; that Louis, about the time was an apprentice in a liquor store, had committed to prison for picking a person's pocket in the market. John Metayer, the other son says he is no relation to the old man, and that his real name is Joseph Santee. It is supposed that a late robbery at Pittsburg, is somehow connected with this mysterious case.

The long agony is over! Months have passed away, and much newspaper speculation has taken place since it was first rumoured that the South-Carolina orator, M'Duffie, and the no less valiant Colonel Cummings, were determined on risking the reputation they had acquired in the councils of their country, and in defiance of every moral and civil obligation, to enter the field for the avowed purpose of Duelling! They met on the 8th inst. at Tuck-a-see-king, on the Carolina shore .-Mr. M'Duffie received his antagonist's fire in the side, which lodged near the back bone. Great apprehensions were entertained for his safety, until a few hours after the recontre took place, when a letter was dispatched by him to an intimate friend in Charleston, which contains the most flattering hopes of his final recovery -" I am wounded, (he says,) but not dangerously; but four hours have elapsed and I feel perfectly comfortable. The bullet entered obliquely into the back, just beow the short ribs. Both surgeons agree that there is no danger -- and my own feelings indicate the same." Colonel Cumming escaped uninjured.

In common with our brethren of the south, we acknowledge the satisfaction which so favourable a termination of this unprofitable affair is calculated to produce-and we think the following anecdote from a late European publication, forcibly exemplifies a fact which has been made manifest by innumerable instances, that points of honour often take their rise from a difference of opinion on subjects too trifling for dispute .- " A traveller, describing to a company the many wonders he had witnessed, stated, amongst others, that he had seen anchovies growing in a field in Egypt. They stared at him, and one another; but one of them was not content with this silent indication of orinion; he expressed his disbelief in rather anequivocal terms; at which, the angry raveller reiterated protestations of the truth of his assertion, adding some menaces and observations, offensive to the sceptic. A hostile rencontre followed, when chance gave the traveller the privilege of firing first, which he had no sooner done. and before his adversary could return the compliment, than he dropped his pistol, and clapping his hand to his forehead, exclaimed, " I protest to God, 'twas CAPERS ! meant;" which explanation, together with a suitable apology for his mistake, terminated the affair."

A man, who lived in a respectable family at the southern extremity of the city in the situation of gardener, shot himself on Saturday morning last while his wife was gone to market. For several days he had appeared desirous of getting his gur with an excuse to go out into the field after game -his wife, however, frustrated this design by secreting it-but this time he took the opportunity of her absence, and procured a pistol from a neighbour, and then went and locked himself up in the garret of the house, where he committed the fatal act. It is supposed that he had become deranged in mind from his want of success in a suit which he had pending in Court.

This evidence of public attention tovards the little weekly SHEET we have been enabled by their munificence to establish, is certainly very flattering, and leaves us reason to felicitate purselves on its future usefulness and prosperity. Though a preference is given to articles of merit, ve are, at times, compelled to defer even these or want of sufficient room. Now, if it were necessary, we might say, the Pedlar is in type, that Oscar's turn will come next, and that we present our best respects to friends Raymond-Pasquin-D. and R. As it is not to be supposed that we should e acquainted with every author, it is desired that all articles selected may be marked, that the deception may not be laid to our charge.

EXTEMPORE ELOQUENCE.

Sir Richard Steele had constructed a very elegant theatre in his house for the recitation of select passages from favorite authors, and wishing to ascertain whether it was as well calculated to gratify the ear as the eye, desired the carpenter, who had completed the work, to ascend a pulpit placed at one end of the building and speak a few sentences. The carpenter obeyed, but when mounted, found himself utterly at a loss for the matter of his harangue. Sir Richard begged he would pronounce whatever came first to his head. Thus encouraged, the new made orator began, and look. ing steadfastly on the knight, in a voice like thunder, exclaimed, "Sir Richard Steele, here has I and these here men been doing your work for three months and never seen the color of your money .-When are you to pay us? I cannot pay my journeymen without money, and money I must have." Sir Richard replied "that he was in raptures with the eloquence, but by no means admired the sub-

Mr. ---, late Vice Chancellor of Trinity College, Dublin, was remarkably fond of bam. Being once present at a table, where a hot ham was brought in, the flavour seemed to delight him; but before he could make an incision, one of company asked him-" Suppose, sir, you had been educated a Jew, or by the year. ANECDOTE.-The Pope once stopping for the night in a small village of Italy, the inhabitants resolved to send him a deputation. The Mayor also suggested to present his Holiness with the chief produce of the country, consisting of pineapples, figs and cream. The pine apples, however, were dispensed with, and each member was to carry figs and cream in silver basins. "Now," said the Mayor, with all the gravity of office, "you are not accustomed to appear before these high personages, therefore let us have no nonsense-do just what you see me do, neither more nor less."-The Deputation was arranged accordingly. The Mayor placed himself majestically and magisterially at its head, armed like his followers, with a basin of figs in the left hand, and of cream in the right. At this time it was the custom to wear beards. The door opened, and the Mayor repeated his caution-" Neither more nor less, I beseech you" There was a step down into the room, but the Mayor not thinking of it, the shock plunged his beard and face into the cream basin, and not being very young, brought him upon his knees, with his hands and basin under him, and his creamed face (richly ornamented with a well lathered and dripping beard, as it were imploringly) raised towards the representative of Saint Peter. The Corporation, thinking this a grave matter of form, simultaneously ducked their bearded faces, prostrated themselves on their marrow-bones, and significantly cast an half inquiring and confident look at their leader, as though to say, "You see we are all right." The Pope was at first (and well he might be) astounded; but burst into as genuine a fit of laughter as his lowest menial could have indulged in; while his officers, conceiving that the addressers meant merely to humbug his Holiness, gathered up the figs and pelted the Body Corporate most lustily. The Mayor hobbled out of the room as fast as he could, closely followed by his brethren, one of whom whispered him, "How lucky that we did not bring the pine-apples; they would have battered our heads to a mummy."

General Stark .- The speech made by General Stark, at the Battle of Bennington, is remarkable for its Yankee indirectness, and pithy brevity .-Drawing his sword, and pointing to the enemy, he thus addressed his men:

" I am not much given to speech making-but, my brave fellows, there are the British-we must beat them, or Molly Stark sleeps a widow to-night." It is needless to say, that his soldiers caught his fire and determination, and pushed on with such ardour that they killed, wounded and captured the whole British detachment.

The Rev John Campbell gravely remarks in his "Second journey in South Africa," that the infants of the women whom he saw, 'cry, or weep exactly as the y do in England!'

According to the same traveller, in certain parts of Southern Africa, the male of particular kinds of birds alone builds the nest. When he has finish. ed the work, it is examined by the female; should it not please her she tears it to pieces, and her obedient mate builds another.

BIOGRAPHY -In former times, the important actions of a man's life were alone considered as worthy of recital. PLUTARCH, though the most enterprising fellow in the world is rather sparing in some of his details. Convertus Nepos is absolutely vexatious-he displays such contempt of matters not relating to the public. As to SALrest, his is the master hand; his precious remains unite the cream, the very essence of History and Biography; the touches of his pencil live and breathe.

How different we moderns ! Boswell is so fond of little things, that he relates anecdotes of Dr. Johnson's Cat.-Lord TEIGNMOUTH, though more dignified, makes up the principal part of his life of Sir William Jones, with extracts from his Latin and Greek Letters .- G. WAKEFIELD loves to speak of himself, and gives us too large a taste of his work. But a late Biographer of Sir Joshua Reynolds, is determined not to loose any thing; he absolutely invades the old gentleman's breeches! In his opinion, walking up stairs is a matter of moment; and unbuttoning one's clothes is considered an achievement to be "eternised here on earth"-Take the following example from the last work :--" So little did Sir Joshua consume his time unnecessarily, that in ascending to his bed chamber highly approved, being a preventative of the he generally undid the buttons of his knees as he TOOTH-ACHE. It purifies and sweetens the went upstairs ! !!

MECHANICAL WONDER.

THE citizens of Philadelphia went in crowds to A see the Mechanical Museum when it was exhibited here, and more recently to the famous Androides of Mr. Haddock, and willingly paid for their admission : and hundreds travelled to Chesnut Hill and gave their dollar to see the ingenious contrivance of Redheffer. Who has not heard of the 40 George street, Southwark, will be punctually automaton, that could play chess, and of the other attended to. which was made to articulate words? both so celebrated in Europe. And who would not give a half eagle to see them? but all these wonders are surpassed by a piece of Mechanism now in this city. which is far more curious, splendid and surprising than any that have been exhibited for money. This wonderful specimen of art consists in beautiful golden bird, wrought to the life, and co vered with brilliant plumage richly imitated in enamel. The beholder first sees only a superb box of gold and precious stones, ornamented with exquisite enamel painting; from this box the bird rises, and moving his head and wings in the most natural manner, he chirps his salutation and then pours out a song as rich in melody as that of the sweetest among the feathered choir, and after entertaining the auditor with this delightful music. vanishes suddenly from sight, leaving the spectator wrapt in pleasing astonishment. And how much does it cost to see this prodigy? The best of all is, it is shown freely without cost or charge, to all those whose good fortune leads them to pur chase lottery tickets, halves or quarters, at

Gibbs' Lucky Office,
